

Cuba and China Sign Agreements to Promote Economic and Commercial Ties

CUBA

CHINA

Havana, October 27 (RHC-Granma)-- China and Cuba have signed five agreements geared toward strengthening trade and economic ties at the island's Ministry of Foreign Trade and Investment.

The documents include framework agreements for China to provide concessional lines of credit for the repair and modernization of Cuba's Electronics Industry Enterprise; an accord to expand the production of solar panels at the Ernesto Che Guevara Electronic Components Entity in Pinar del Río; and the launch of the fifth phase of the Technical Assistance for Agriculture in Cuba Project.

The agreements were signed by Cuban Minister of Foreign Trade and Investment, Rodrigo Malmierca; and Chen Xi, ambassador of the People's Republic of China on the island.

Xi also presented Cuba with a donation of one million USD to support recovery efforts in areas affected by Hurricane Irma.

The signing of these documents reaffirms the willingness of both governments and peoples to strengthen and expand bilateral economic and commercial relations, and in so doing give continuity to various projects.
