

Spain's Repsol Signs 1.2 Billion Dollar Financing Deal with Venezuela's PDVSA

Caracas, February 15 (RHC) — Repsol signed a financing deal Friday with Venezuelan state oil company PDVSA that calls for the Spanish energy major to invest 1.2 billion dollars to boost the output of the companies' Petroquiriquire joint venture, Mercopress news agency reported today.

PDVSA boss Rafael Ramirez, who is also Venezuela's vice president, and Repsol CEO Antonio Brufau signed the loan accord for the joint venture, in which the Venezuelan firm has the majority stake.

The financing accord was inked at a rate of Libor plus 4.5%, which Ramirez described as “very good,” and it is aimed at boosting output from a current level of 50,000 bpd to 60,000 bpd in five years at Petroquiriquire's three mature fields in eastern and western Venezuela.

Ramirez said the agreement was part of PDVSA's larger effort to raise production and thanked Brufau for his personal involvement in relations between Repsol and Venezuela. Brufau, for his part, stressed Repsol's long-standing ties with Venezuela, a country where it has operated since 1993.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/14656-spains-repsol-signs-12-billion-dollar-financing-deal-with-venezuelas-pdvsa>

Radio Habana Cuba