

Cuba to Conduct on Sunday Trial Run of its Electoral Machinery

Havana, November 18 (RHC)-- Cuban municipal authorities are busy preparing for a trial run of the electoral system this Sunday, November 19th, in anticipation of constituency delegates elections scheduled for the 26th of November.

The National Electoral Commission said earlier this month that the first stage of the electoral process had successfully concluded, with the nomination of over 27 thousand candidates contending to fill the position for delegates at constituencies nationwide. The electoral commission said attendance at these nomination assemblies had stayed at 78 percent.
