Havana, November 24 (RHC)-- Cuba's First Vice President Miguel Díaz-Canel has exchanged experiences with students and professors of a pedagogical school in the central province of Cienfuegos.

Díaz-Canel toured several areas of the Octavio García school and was interested in the progress of the teaching-educational process.

Talking to the students, Díaz-Canel asked them questions about their training practices, their daily routine, sports exercise, the reason for their interest in pedagogical studies, and whether or not the center is meeting their expectations.

In addition, he called on students to suggest what should be improved in the training program, and urged the encouragement of debate for the development of thought and reflection.
