NSA Fires Employee Over Snowden Leaks

Washington, February 18 (RHC)-- The National Security Agency, the NSA, says it has forced out a civilian staffer and downgraded two others in response to the security breach that allowed Edward Snowden to seize a massive trove of documents.

The NSA says Snowden used the fired employee's public Public Key Infrastructure certificate and password to access internal files.

Snowden, currently in Moscow under political aslym, has denied using his colleagues' passwords.
