

Cuban and Panamanian presidents hold official talks in Havana

Havana, October 30 (RHC)-- Cuban President Miguel Díaz-Canel received on Monday his Panamanian counterpart, Juan Carlos Varela Rodríguez, who is on an official visit to Cuba.

During the cordial meeting, both leaders talked about the good status of bilateral relations and prospects of cooperation, foreign investment and trade.

Díaz-Canel thanked Panama for its support for the Cuban resolution presented each year at the UN General Assembly against the U.S. economic, commercial and financial blockade on the island. They also addressed other issues on regional and international interest.

Upon his arrival, the Panamanian leader paid homage to Cuban National Hero José Martí, and visited Havana's Center for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology and the 'Solidarity with Panama' School, an educational institution of national reference designed for the care of children with disabilities or special education needs from preschool to ninth grade.
