

Women sue U.S. college, accuse 3 male professors of sexual misconduct

Boston, November 19 (RHC)-- In the U.S. state of Massachusetts, seven women are suing Dartmouth College over rape, sexual assault, harassment and discrimination. Three male professors -- Todd Heatherton, William Kelley and Paul Whalen -- are accused of creating a “21st Century Animal House.”

The three men allegedly coerced women into drinking, and groped, leered at and in some cases sexually assaulted the women. The lawsuit alleges that a “predatory boy’s club” culture made female students feel trapped and forced into unwanted acts for fear of risking their careers.

Dartmouth reportedly ignored reports of the professors’ conduct for 16 years, and the university allowed the men to either retire or voluntarily resign rather than face legal or disciplinary action.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/176903-women-sue-us-college-accuse-3-male-professors-of-sexual-misconduct>

Radio Habana Cuba