

Mel Stride, the newly appointed Commons leader said that Trump is entitled to his opinion but he would not be picking the next prime minister of the country. "That process, as you know, will be one involving the parliamentary party and then the membership itself," Stride said.

Donald Trump, who has regularly criticized May's Brexit tactics, said Britain must leave the bloc on the due date of October 31st with or without a deal and praised a more radical Brexit-supporting potential successor as British leader.

Upon his arrival, Trump complained about London Mayor Sadiq Khan. Calling his "very dumb" and "incompetent," who has done "a terrible job."

Khan has attracted the ire of the U.S. president for comparing Trump to "the fascists of the 20th century" in an opinion piece. "President Donald Trump is just one of the most egregious examples of a growing global threat. The far right is on the rise around the world, threatening our hard-won rights and freedoms and the values that have defined our liberal, democratic societies for more than 70 years."

He compared Trump with Viktor Orbán in Hungary, Matteo Salvini in Italy, Marine Le Pen in France and Nigel Farage in the U.K. who are "using the same divisive tropes of the fascists of the 20th century to garner support, but with new sinister methods to deliver their message."

While Monday was dominated by Royal pageantry, the second day of Trump's trip is focussing on politics, including breakfast with business leaders, a news conference and a dinner at the U.S. ambassador's residence.
