

Yellow Vest protesters hit Paris for 34th weekend

Paris, July 6 (RHC)-- Police used tear gas to briefly push back Yellow Vest protesters who had flooded Paris streets for the 34th week in a row on Saturday.

Since the movement began last November, tens of thousands have marched every Saturday through the streets of France, airing a number of grievances, ranging from taxes on fuel to income inequality, and an end to the administration of French President Emmanuel Macron.

According to official numbers, over 6,000 took to the streets last weekend across the country. Today's figures number around 10,000.
