

Report shows Monsanto ran spying and intimidation campaign against critics

London, August 9 (RHC)-- An explosive new report by The Guardian reveals that U.S. agribusiness giant Monsanto ran a “fusion center” to surveil and discredit journalists and activists who publicly criticized or wrote damning reports about Monsanto’s weed killer Roundup.

Documents show Monsanto collected extensive intelligence on the legendary singer-songwriter Neil Young, paid Google to promote search results that cast critics unfavorably, and contacted at least one reporter’s editor in hopes of having her fired.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/198598-report-shows-monsanto-ran-spying-and-intimidation-campaign-against-critics>

Radio Habana Cuba