

Alabama Republicans want Muslim congresswoman Ilhan Omar expelled

Washington, August 27 (RHC)-- Republicans in the US state of Alabama have approved a resolution calling for Muslim American Congresswoman Ilhan Omar to be expelled from Congress.

The Republicans targeted the Minnesota Democrat at the GOP summer meeting in Auburn last weekend, AL.com reported Tuesday. The Somali refugee who became one of the first two Muslim women elected to Congress last year is accused of "disturbing record of using anti-Semitic language that includes alleging Jewish money is used to buy American influence regarding its policy toward Israel."

"Proceed with the expulsion process in accordance to Article 1, Section 5 of the U.S. Constitution," reads the resolution. The Republicans of the Yellowhammer said she "dismissed" the September 11 terrorist attacks and "sympathized with a convicted terrorist."

Nancy Pelosi opened the door to a direct personal attack on Trump by diplomatically questioning his temperament, but Congresswoman Ilhan Omar stepped in and ran with it, according to Myles Hoenig.

Omar immigrated to the U.S. as a refugee in 1995 when she was a child. She became a U.S. citizen in 2000 at age 17. US President Donald Trump has previously called for her to be sent back to her country.

Omar has been accused of anti-Semitism by Trump and the rest of Republicans over her criticism of the Israeli regime along with Rashida Tlaib, another Muslim congresswoman.

Omar and Tlaib are supporters of the anti-Israel Boycott, Divestment, Sanctions (BDS) movement and have publicly criticized the regime despite pressure also from their own party.
