

U.S. government detained record number of migrant children in 2019

Washington, November 17 (RHC)-- Newly-released government data shows the U.S. government has detained a record number of migrant children over the past year -- nearly 70,000 babies, children and teenagers held in U.S. government custody. That's a 42% increase over the last fiscal year.

The American Academy of Pediatrics has condemned child detention, saying even short periods of detention can cause psychological trauma and long-term mental health risks.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/207756-us-government-detained-record-number-of-migrant-children-in-2019>

Radio Habana Cuba