

White House press secretary under pressure to hold press briefing

Washington, January 14 (RHC)-- In the United States, a group of 13 former bipartisan White House press secretaries, Foreign Service and military officials have written a CNN opinion piece demanding the Trump administration resume its press briefings.

White House Press Secretary Stephanie Grisham has yet to hold a single briefing since becoming President Donald Trump's chief spokesperson in July. White House spokesperson Hogan Gidley called the letter writers "D.C. establishment swamp creatures."
