

Trump to release Israel peace plan ahead of Netanyahu visit

Washington, January 24 (RHC)-- U.S. President Donald Trump will finally unveil his "great" plan for peace in the Middle East before Israeli leaders visit Washington next week. But Trump quickly added that while the Palestinians may not like it, it will be really good for them.

Trump has long teased the existence of a plan that would resolve the long-running dispute between Israel and the Palestinians, reportedly developed by his son-in-law Jared Kushner. Its release, however, has been repeatedly delayed.

On the way to an event in Florida on Thursday, Trump told reporters on board Air Force One that he intends to make the plan public ahead of next week's visit to Washington by Israel's caretaker Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his chief rival Benny Gantz.

"It's a great plan," claimed Trump. "It's a plan that really would work."
