

Moscow's annual book fair draws crowds despite coronavirus curbs

Moscow, June 8 (RHC)-- Hundreds of Moscow residents flocked to an open-air book fair in Red Square, though some publishing houses opted to stay away as city authorities keep most restrictions in place.

Organizers of the annual book fair, which was attended by 300,000 people last year, have implemented numerous measures to stem the spread of the virus - with chairs spaced one metre apart and temperature checks at the entrance.

The event drew up to 600 visitors within hours of its opening.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/225113-moscows-annual-book-fair-draws-crowds-despite-coronavirus-curbs>

Radio Habana Cuba