

Study shows coronavirus mortality in Italy is highest among poor

Rome, July 6 (RHC)-- Poor Italians are significantly more likely to die of the coronavirus than higher-income groups, the country's first significant study into the disease's disproportionate social impact showed.

Low-income groups were also more likely to be forced to work during lockdown, in sectors such as agriculture, public transport and assistance for the elderly, ISTAT said, concluding that COVID-19 had "accentuated pre-existing inequalities."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/227726-study-shows-coronavirus-mortality-in-italy-is-highest-among-poor>

Radio Habana Cuba