

Protesters in Puerto Rico call for halt to tourism to curb mounting coronavirus cases

San Juan, July 27 (RHC)-- In Puerto Rico, a protest caravan on Saturday called for San Juan's International Airport to shut down all nonessential travel, as tourists continue to vacation on the island despite rising COVID-19 cases and are often seen not wearing masks or practicing social distancing.

Ricardo Santos of the Socialist Workers Movement, which organized the protest, told reporters: "We're not backing down. We're going to continue this caravan and this struggle, because this is a life-or-death situation, and this governor has not been addressing this issue. So, as we've done in the past, the people are going to take matters into their own hands."
