

Spain counts more than 100,000 coronavirus cases in two weeks

Madrid, September 4 (RHC)-- More than 100,000 people in Spain have tested positive for the novel coronavirus over the past two weeks, according to the ministry of health.

Nearly 9,000 new coronavirus infections over the past 24 hours were added to the tally that has surged to 488,513 confirmed cases.

Madrid has been home to nearly one-third of the country's 100,155 infections over the past two weeks, reporting the worst outbreak both in terms of real numbers and per capita cases.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/233264-spain-counts-more-than-100000-coronavirus-cases-in-two-weeks>

Radio Habana Cuba