Omaha, October 29 (RHC)-- In the U.S. state of Nebraska, hundreds of Donald Trump supporters were left stranded in the freezing cold for hours at an airfield in Omaha Tuesday night following a Trump rally.

According to reports, at least seven people were taken to the hospital. One 68-year-old man was found shivering with possible hypothermia and altered mental status, according to an account on the Omaha police scanner.

The rally was held three miles from the closest parking lot, and the Trump campaign didn't have enough buses to transport everyone in a timely manner.
