

Trump administration ends protection for endangered Gray Wolves

Trump administration ends protection for endangered Gray Wolves. (Photo: Internet)

Washington, November 1 (RHC)-- The Donald Trump administration says it is ending endangered species protections for the Gray Wolf, saying a scattered population of 6,000 wolves across the U.S. is enough to save the species.

The Natural Resources Defense Council blasted the decision, writing in a statement: “As we face a biodiversity crisis of global proportions, it is imperative for us to recognize that this isn’t just about wolves. The fate of humanity is intertwined with the fate of species and healthy ecosystems.”

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/238441-trump-administration-ends-protection-for-endangered-gray-wolves>

Radio Habana Cuba