Lawyers cannot find parents of 666 children separated from families at the U.S. border

San Diego, November 10 (RHC)-- U.S. lawyers working on reuniting children who were separated from their families at the southern border with Mexico say they still cannot find the parents of 666 children — over 100 more children than previously reported.

The children were taken away from their families between April and June 2018 at the height of Trump's "zero tolerance" family separation policy.
