

Trump says he will not change his mind on U.S. election fraud

Washington, November 30 (RHC)-- U.S. President Donald Trump has vowed not to change his mind about what he called "tremendous cheating" in the 2020 presidential election. "It's not like you're going to change my mind. In other words, my mind will not change in six months. There was tremendous cheating here," Trump told Fox News in his first television interview since Election Day on Sunday.

The U.S. president further vowed to pursue the lawsuits he has filed in the hope of overturning the election, won by former Vice President Joe Biden. "I'm going to use 125 percent of my energy to do it," Trump said. "You need a judge that's willing to hear a case. You need a Supreme Court that's willing to make a real big decision."

Donald Trump, who is yet to concede defeat, also complained about courts rejecting his claims in battleground states. "What kind of a court system is this?" Trump asked, adding that he would like to file "one nice, big, beautiful lawsuit talking about this and many other things with tremendous proof."

So far, Trump has failed to offer any tangible evidence of election fraud. "But the difficulty now is translating those allegations, intuitions and the reports into actual admissible evidence in court," Judge Ken Starr told Fox News. "Rudy [Giuliani] in the Pennsylvania litigation ... said according to the opinion, this case is not about fraud. Well, at this stage we need to have the evidence."
