

Trump ignored pleas to call off mob during attack on Congress

Trump ignored pleas to call off mob during Capitol assault

Washington, January 12 (RHC)-- The Washington Post reports that during last week's insurrection on Capitol Hill, Republican leaders tried repeatedly and failed to get Trump to call off the mob he incited.

Trump reportedly could not be reached because he was too busy watching the crisis unfold on live television for hours.

Connecticut Democratic Senator Chris Murphy said Trump is continuing to thwart attempts to secure the January 20 inauguration. Murphy said: "President Trump is still in charge. And part of the reason why Congress is talking about impeachment right now is because he is not being helpful in trying to guarantee the security of the inauguration. In fact, he seems to be doing more harm than good."

Washington, D.C.'s attorney general said Monday he's considering riot incitement charges against President Trump, his son Donald Trump Jr., as well as attorney Rudy Giuliani and Republican Congressman Mo Brooks, for inciting Trump's mob to violence.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/244440-trump-ignored-pleas-to-call-off-mob-during-attack-on-congress>

Radio Habana Cuba