Roger Stone security guards and Republican officials joined mob attacking U.S. Capitol

Washington, February 15 (RHC)-- New information continues to emerge about the insurrection attack on the U.S. Capitol last month. The New York Times reports at least six people who were part of the mob that entered the Capitol worked as security for Trump ally Roger Stone and were linked to the far-right Oath Keepers.

HuffPost is reporting at least 57 state and local Republican officials were at the Capitol insurrection, and almost all have faced calls to resign. Only two have stepped down — both were arrested for taking part in the riot. In one case, a Florida county commissioner, Joe Mullins, sponsored buses to transport people to Washington, D.C. In the lead-up to January 6, he said on a local radio program: “Maybe there are some liberals I’d like to see their heads cut off.”
