

Donald Trump to return to social media with his own platform soon

Donald Trump -- remember him? -- is set to return to social media after he was banned on Twitter?

Palm Beach, March 22 (RHC)-- Former U.S. President Donald Trump is set to return to social media after he was banned on Twitter. Senior adviser Jason Miller made the announcement On Sunday, telling Fox News's Mediabuzz that Trump was "returning to social media in two or three months" with "his own platform."

Miller further claimed that the platform would "completely redefine the game" and rake in "tens of millions" of users.

In an interview last month, Twitter's chief financial officer, Ned Segal, said the company's ban on his account will remain even if he decides to run again for office. "The way our policies work, when you're removed from the platform, you're removed from the platform whether you're a commentator, you're a CFO or you are a former or current public official," Segal said.

Twitter permanently suspended Trump from its service "due to the risk of further incitement of violence" following the January 6 riot on Capitol Hill. Amid the suspension on his account, Trump issued a statement acknowledging the end of his term.

The former president has insisted that he "would not be SILENCED!" due to Twitter's permanent suspension of his personal account.
