

U.S. military logistics convoy attacked in Iraqi capital

Another support convoy for U.S. troops in Iraq has been targeted,

Baghdad, April 29 (RHC)-- Another support convoy for U.S. troops in Iraq has been targeted, this time in the capital of the Arab country.

As reported Thursday by the Saber News channel on the social network Telegram, the new attack on the military convoy carrying logistical supplies for U.S. troops took place in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

The number of attacks against US military and diplomatic facilities has soared in recent months, as Iraqis increasingly raise their voices to demand the departure of U.S. troops. The U.S. coalition has on several occasions requested the help of local companies to dodge the attacks and transfer their equipment.

In this regard, on April 7, Iraq and the United States announced in a joint statement that they had agreed to withdraw "all" U.S. combat troops from Iraqi soil.

Despite this situation, Washington has not yet taken practical steps to leave the Arab country, so the Iraqi popular forces warn that they will resort to the Afghan method -that is, the use of force- to expel the Americans.
