

Amid pandemic, Biden administration's indifference towards Cuba is notorious

Havana, May 18 (RHC)—Four months after its inauguration, the Biden administration remains complacent with the draconian measures adopted by Donald Trump against Cuba amid the COVID-19 pandemic.

On Twitter, the island's Foreign Minister, Bruno Rodriguez, stated that the new administration's declared priorities on human rights, leadership in confronting the COVID 19, and the reversal of the atrocious policies implemented by the former administration contrast with the notorious indifference and insensitivity with which it still applies Trump's policies against the island.

Amid the COVID-19 epidemic, Cuba is denied the right to acquire technologies, raw materials, reagents, diagnostic means, medicines, devices, and equipment.

Cuba is systematically denied technologies of U.S. origin or with more than 10 percent of components from that country.

2020, the year when the epidemic spread on the island, the U.S. blockade has had the greatest impact on its health system.
