

Olympian Gwen Berry turns back on U.S. flag in protest against racism

Gwen Berry turns her back on racism. (Image Credit: Patrick Smith/Getty)

Eugene, June 29 (RHC)-- U.S. Olympic hammer thrower Gwen Berry is facing backlash after turning her back to the U.S. flag while the national anthem played during a medal ceremony at the U.S. Olympic trials in Eugene, Oregon.

Toward the end of the anthem, Berry turned away from the flag and placed a black T-shirt with the words “Activist Athlete” on her head. Following the nonviolent protest, Berry said: “My purpose and my mission is bigger than sports. I’m here to represent those ... who died due to systemic racism. That’s the important part. That’s why I’m going. That’s why I’m here today.”

Gwen Berry is a longtime activist, who famously raised her fist during the Star-Spangled Banner after winning gold at the 2019 Pan American Games.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/deportes/262238-olympian-gwen-berry-turns-back-on-us-flag-in-protest-against-racism>

Radio Habana Cuba