

More unmarked graves found at another Canadian school for First Nations children

In Canada, over 160 unmarked graves have been found at the former Kuper Island Industrial School

Ottawa, July 14 (RHC)-- In Canada, over 160 unmarked graves have been found at the former Kuper Island Industrial School, which operated as a boarding school for Indigenous children from 1890 to 1975 on Penelakut Tribe territory.

This is the latest in a series of recent discoveries of hundreds of other unmarked graves, which have shed light on the brutality of former government-funded boarding schools run by the Catholic Church across Canada. Some 150,000 Indigenous children were sent to the schools, many separated from their families.
