

Equatorial Guinea shuts UK embassy after London imposes sanctions in violation of international law

Image not found or type unknown

FILE PHOTO. The Embassy of The Republic of Equatorial Guinea in London, located at 13 Park Place, London, England. © Getty Images / Ben_Gingell

London, July 27 (RHC)-- The African nation of Equatorial Guinea slammed the UK for interfering in its domestic affairs, as it announced the “total closure” of its embassy in London in response to UK sanctions on the son of the country’s president.

The move, announced by the country’s foreign minister, Simeon Oyon Esono, followed the UK’s recent decision to slap the president’s son, who serves as Vice president, with sanctions.

The UK Foreign Office claims that Teodoro Obiang Mangué reportedly spent $500 million on properties, cars and other items, as part of a jet-setting lifestyle fuelled by corrupt behavior and the soliciting of bribes.

In response, Equatorial Guinea called the sanctions “unilateral and illegal,” aimed at “fomenting against the good image” of the country. Calling Britain’s actions a breach of “the principle of international law,” the country’s foreign ministry declared that Equatorial Guinea would be shutting its embassy in London as it will not accept “interference into the country’s internal affairs.”

Simeon Oyon Esono did not specify a timeframe for the closure of the embassy, that he called the “first decision” that’s being taken in retaliation.

In a separate case, a French court handed Obiang a three-year suspended sentence in February 2020, ordering the confiscation of his assets in the country and giving him a ?30 million ($25.64 million) fine following a corruption investigation. A final ruling on the case by the Court of Cassation is expected on Wednesday.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/265236-equatorial-guinea-shuts-uk-embassy-after-london-imposes-sanctions-in-violation-of-international-law>

Radio Habana Cuba