La Paz, August 10 (RHC)-- Bolivian social organizations denounced at a press conference in La Paz on Monday the destabilization attempts and threats of a new coup d'état by the same executors of the November 2019 coup against Evo Morales and declared to be in a state of emergency in the face of these events.

This was made known by the representative of the Bolivian Federation of Mining Workers Union, Gonzalo Quispe, who pointed out that the unions will be vigilant against any destabilization attempt that the right-wing wants to organize in the country. And he reiterated that the workers will defend the democratically-elected government of Luis Arce and David Choquehuanca.

Flora Aguilar, a representative of the Confederation of Peasant Women, told reporters: "We say to the fascist coup plotters who claim they have recipes to overthrow the government; we tell them from here: the social organizations will not allow it." "Today we are more united than ever to be able to defend the democracy we have recovered after the coup d'état against Evo Morales."
