New York extends eviction moratorium halted by U.S. Supreme Court

New York, September 2 (RHC)-- The United States recorded more than 210,000 coronavirus cases Wednesday as COVID-19 hospitalizations and deaths continue to rise. In New York, lawmakers have extended an eviction moratorium through January 15.

New York is the first state to enact renter protections since the U.S. Supreme Court last week threw out a nationwide eviction moratorium ordered by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
