Havana, September 8 (RHC)-- Cuban authorities announced Tuesday the elimination of restrictions on quantity and weight of luggage for travelers arriving at Varadero and Cayo Coco Resorts airports.

According to local media in the western province of Matanzas, limiting one single luggage per passenger becomes inoperative, a measure adopted a few months ago as part of the fight against the Covid-19 pandemic.

On the other hand, the Juan Gualberto Gómez International Airport administration posted on Facebook that passengers may carry up to 120-kilogram luggage.

The airport administration also announced that health personnel would make PCR tests at the hotel instead of the airport.

The 14-day quarantine for Cuban travelers upon arrival is still in force, according to the publication.
