Youth activists around the globe are holding a global climate strike on Friday, September 24th

New York, September 22 (RHC)-- Youth activists around the globe are holding a global climate strike on Friday, September 24th -- which will coincide with the United Nation's Climate Week.

Ahead of the strike, Swedish climate activist Greta Thunberg said the movement also needs to tackle racism, sexism and inequality.

Greta Thunberg said: "The climate crisis is caused by the same thing that is also fueling other crises and inequality around the world and the ecological crisis. And we cannot just solve one of these crises without also addressing the others."
