

Social Democrats to form coalition government in Germany

Image not found or type unknown

Social Democrats to form coalition government in Germany?

Berlin, September 27 (RHC)-- In Germany, the center-left Social Democratic Party has narrowly claimed victory in an election that puts an end to the 16-year era of Angela Merkel's leadership. Merkel's party, the Christian Democrats, won the second most votes, with the Green Party coming in third.

Social Democrats will now have to form a ruling coalition, which could take weeks, or possibly months. The SDP's candidate for chancellor, Olaf Scholz, who positioned himself as a leader in the vein of Angela Merkel during his campaign, vowed to tackle the climate crisis and modernize industry.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/271754-social-democrats-to-form-coalition-government-in-germany>

Radio Habana Cuba