

Cuba reports 104 new COVID-19 infections, one fatality

Havana, December 6 (RHC)—Cuban health authorities reported on Monday 104 new COVID-19 infections and one fatality associated with the disease over the last 24 hours.

According to the Public Health Ministry (MINSAP) website, there were 533 active cases hospitalized on the island at midnight.

The Caribbean island has accumulated 963,194 positive cases and 8,310 fatalities since the beginning of the pandemic on the national territory in March of 2020.

Holguin reported 30 cases, and Camaguey 25 cases. Those were the provinces with the highest number of cases.
