

Israeli tank fire hits southwestern Syrian village

File photo of Israeli tanks in the Tel Aviv-occupied Syrian territory of the Golan Heights

Damascus, January 6 (RHC)-- Israeli tanks have reportedly fired a number of shells towards the Quneitra Province that lies in Syria's extreme southwest. The official Syrian Arab News Agency (SANA)'s reported late Wednesday that the tank shells had fallen near Quneitra's al-Horriah Village. "Explosions were heard in the area," the report said.

The attack was carried out as Israeli helicopters were seen hovering overhead, it added. Syria and the Israeli regime are technically at war since the latter has been occupying the Arab country's Golan Heights since 1967, when the regime launched its second major war against region's Arab nations. Tel Aviv uses the hugely strategic plateau to launch recurrent attacks against the Syrian soil.

Most recently, the regime attacked Latakia, the country's biggest port city, which lies in its northwest with missiles last Tuesday, prompting Syria's air defenses to confront the projectiles.

Israel claims that its attacks target alleged supplies that are headed for the Lebanese resistance movement of Hezbollah. On countless occasions, though, the strikes have targeted the reinforcement belonging to Syria's military and its allies.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/281987-israeli-tank-fire-hits-southwestern-syrian-village>

Radio Habana Cuba