

Hundreds evacuated in Northern California as firefighters battle rare January wildfire

In Northern California, firefighters have contained about one-third of a 1,000-acre wildfire near the coastal communities of Monterey and Big Sur.

San Francisco, January 24 (RHC)-- In Northern California, firefighters have contained about one-third of a 1,000-acre wildfire near the coastal communities of Monterey and Big Sur.

Hundreds of residents were evacuated over the weekend. The blaze is the first 100-acre-plus wildfire in the area to burn in the month of January in over a decade, as the climate crisis and a two-decade drought have led to extended wildfire seasons.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/283864-hundreds-evacuated-in-northern-california-as-firefighters-battle-rare-january-wildfire>

Radio Habana Cuba