

Sarah Palin tests positive for coronavirus after flaunting NYC vaccination requirement

Former Alaska Governor Sarah Palin admits she has tested positive for coronavirus.

New York, January 25 (RHC)-- Former Alaska Governor Sarah Palin admits she has tested positive for coronavirus. Palin's announcement prompted a U.S. district judge in New York to delay the start of Palin's defamation trial against The New York Times, which was set to begin on Monday.

Palin has refused to be vaccinated against COVID-19, telling a conservative conference last month: "It will be over my dead body that I'll have to get a shot." One political commentator said that she hoped "it didn't have to come to that, but..."

The New York Times reports that on Saturday Palin dined indoors at Elio's Italian restaurant in Manhattan despite a city ordinance requiring customers to provide proof of vaccination.
