

Two more journalists murdered in Mexico, the 10th and 11th killing so far this year

Image not found or type unknown

Mexico City, May 12 (RHC)-- In Mexico, two more journalists have been killed in the Gulf Coast state of Veracruz. Yessenia Mollinedo Falconi was the director of the online news site El Veraz. Sheila Johana García Olivera was a reporter at the same outlet.

News of their deaths came as journalists across Mexico took to the streets protesting the murder of another journalist in the northern state of Sinaloa, Luis Enrique Ramírez. At least 11 journalists have been killed in Mexico this year alone.

Rodolfo Montes, a Mexican journalist and friend of those recently murdered, told reporters: "The wave of murders against the journalistic profession has become uncontrollable. Today, just as we are protesting here in Mexico City, in Tijuana and in Sinaloa, we learned the sad news that two of our colleagues were taken from their lives in Veracruz. It is carnage against journalists in our country. There are no guarantees. The Mexican state is not providing the guarantees so that we can freely exercise our journalistic exercise in Mexican territory."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/287601-two-more-journalists-murdered-in-mexico-the-10th-and-11th-killing-so-far-this-year>

Radio Habana Cuba