Suspect in Buffalo massacre spent months plotting racist attack

Buffalo, May 17 (RHC) -- A white 18-year-old suspect who killed 10 people at a supermarket he deliberately targeted in Buffalo's Black community carefully planning his assault and intended to continue his rampage with an attack on a second location.

Amid the mourning, calls for justice are growing. Civil rights lawyer Ben Crump spoke in Buffalo, telling those gathered: "What happened on Saturday was an act of domestic terrorism, and we have to define it as such. We can't sugarcoat it. We can't try to explain it away, talking about mental illness. No, this was a act of domestic terrorism perpetrated by a young white supremacist."
