

Gabriel Tarso's message from atop Mount Everest: Out Bolsonaro!

Brasilia, May 20 (RHC)-- Brazilian climber Gabriel Tarso reached the top of Mount Everest for the second time and opened a banner with a message to the whole world: "Out Bolsonaro!"

"I reached the top of the world again -- Mount Everest. Thank you very much to all who encouraged me!," he said. "This time, I dedicate this second summit to those who have never been silent in the last four years but also especially to those who remained silent. For those, like me, who learned in the bitterest way that all silence has its price."

"This second summit is for all those who have a second chance to do something different in October and call for a better Brazil, so that we can once again be proud of green and yellow, either on the streets of an inland city or at the highest point on the planet," Tarso stressed.

"Mount Everest has been climbed 10,657 times since the first climbers reached its summit in 1953, on both the Nepalese and Tibetan sides," the Brazilian magazine Forum recalled, adding that 311 people died trying to conquer the mountain.

The reactions of the Brazilians to the message from Everest were immediate. "It's not Fake News, it's the people speaking... Gabriel Tarso spoke on behalf of all suffocated Brazilians," Simone Martins, a young lawyer, tweeted.

Another activist noted that the Brazilian president might react with hostility to this new action against his regime. He pointed to a recent tweet by Leonardo DiCaprio about the importance of the Amazon rainforest. The Brazilian president responded by calling out the actor, saying the DiCaprio "better keep his mouth shut instead of talking nonsense."
