

President Díaz-Canel listens to Cuban students' views

Havana, May 23 (RHC)-- Cuban President Miguel Díaz-Canel listened to the opinions of young people from the High School Students Federation, as part of the meetings he regularly holds with different sectors of Cuban society.

The Twitter site of the Cuban Presidency confirmed that the main concerns of the students were about their professional training and how to do more for the country.

Likewise, they asked the President to take them more into account for the Revolution's impact tasks.

"We want to help in the most complex communities," said Pedro Pablo, from the Havana municipality of Boyeros, and assured that the young people of his generation are not oblivious to the nation's problems.

Meanwhile, Maura Mestre, from 10 de Octubre Municipality, asked governments, institutions and companies to go more to the schools to help in the vocational preparation of students
