

Donald Trump, Ivanka and Don Jr. to be questioned in New York fraud case

Former U.S. President Donald Trump and two of his children, Ivanka and Donald Jr., have agreed to be questioned under oath next month by New York Attorney General Letitia James's office.

New York, June 10 (RHC)-- Former U.S. President Donald Trump and two of his children, Ivanka and Donald Jr., have agreed to be questioned under oath next month by New York Attorney General Letitia James's office.

The New York Court of Appeals ruled the trio must sit for depositions as part of James's civil investigation into the Trump Organization's business practices.

The questioning will begin July 15, barring a court intervention. Observers are certain that the Trump family will try to stop the depositions at the last minute and tied up proceedings in court so that they will not have to testify.
