

Cuba, close to 10 million people vaccinated against COVID-19

Havana, June 18 (RHC)-- Cuba is approaching 10 million people fully vaccinated with anti-COVID-19 vaccines, with 9,969,774 citizens who have completed the process.

According to the Ministry of Public Health (MINSAP), this figure represents 90 % of the Cuban population.

As of June 15, reported MINSAP on its website, 10,675,880 people received at least one dose of the national immunogens Soberana 02, Soberana Plus, and Abdala, of whom 9,413,851 received a second dose and 9,114,967 received the third one.

The country has administered 37,974,521 doses of Cuban anti-COVID-19 vaccines.

Since the outbreak of the epidemic in Cuba, in March 2020, 1,105,707 patients have been diagnosed positive for the SARS-CoV-2 coronavirus, of which 1,097,022 have been recovered, a figure equivalent to 99.2% of the infections.

In this period, 8,529 people have died from complications associated with the disease, for a case fatality rate of 0.77%.
