

UN secretary-general says climate goal of limiting warming to 1.5°C in danger of dying

United Nations Secretary-General António Guterres said the Paris climate accord's goal of limiting global temperature rise to 1.5 degrees Celsius above preindustrial levels was on "life support."

Berlin, July 20 (RHC)-- United Nations Secretary-General António Guterres said the Paris climate accord's goal of limiting global temperature rise to 1.5 degrees Celsius above preindustrial levels was on "life support."

Speaking at a climate conference in Berlin, Secretary-General António Guterres said: “No nation is immune. Yet we continue to feed our fossil fuel addiction. What troubles me most is that, in facing this global crisis, we are failing to work together as a multilateral community. Nations continue to play the blame game instead of taking responsibility for our collective futures.”

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/294007-un-secretary-general-says-climate-goal-of-limiting-warming-to-15c-in-danger-of-dying>

Radio Habana Cuba