

India confirms Asia's first Monkeypox death

Vials of samples to be tested for Monkey pox

The WHO says 78 countries have reported more than 18,000 cases of Monkeypox, the majority in Europe [File: Dado Ruvic/Reuters]

New Delhi, August 1 (RHC)-- India has confirmed its first Monkeypox death, a young man in the southern state of Kerala, in what is only the fourth known death from the disease in the current outbreak.

The death, reported on Monday, is the first in Asia. Last week, Spain reported two monkeypox-related deaths and Brazil its first. The World Health Organization declared the outbreak a global health emergency on July 23rd.

The 22-year-old Indian man died on Saturday, Kerala's revenue minister told reporters, adding that the government had isolated 21 people who had come in contact with him. "The person reached Kerala on July 21st but visited a hospital only on July 26th when he displayed fatigue and fever," Minister K Rajan said, adding that there was no reason to panic as none of the primary contacts was showing symptoms.

Kerala's health minister, Veena George, told reporters on Sunday that the man's family informed authorities that he had tested positive in the United Arab Emirates before returning to India.

India's federal health ministry had no comment on the death, except for saying that the government had formed a task force of senior officials to monitor monkeypox cases in the country, where local media have reported at least five infections.

The WHO said late last month that 78 countries had reported more than 18,000 cases of Monkeypox, the majority in Europe. It says the Monkeypox virus causes a disease with less severe symptoms than smallpox and occurs mainly in central and west Africa. The disease is transmitted from animals to humans.

Human-to-human transmission happens through contact with bodily fluids, lesions on the skin or on internal mucosal surfaces, such as in the mouth or throat, respiratory droplets and contaminated objects.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/295226-india-confirms-asias-first-monkeypox-death>

Radio Habana Cuba