

FBI alleges Iranian man plotted to kill former National Security Adviser John Bolton

Washington, August 11 (RHC)-- The U.S. Justice Department has charged an Iranian citizen with plotting to murder President Trump's former national security advisor John Bolton. Federal prosecutors claim that Shahram Poursafi offered to pay a hitman $300,000 last November to assassinate Bolton in Washington, D.C., or Maryland.

The man Poursafi allegedly tried to hire was in fact an FBI informant. Federal agents say Poursafi is a member of Iran's Revolutionary Guard who sought revenge for the Trump administration's assassination of a top Iranian commander in Baghdad in January 2020. This is Assistant Attorney General Matt Olsen.

Matthew Olsen told reporters: "This assassination plot was undertaken in apparent retaliation for the January 2020 killing of Qassem Soleimani. We face a rising threat from authoritarian regimes who seek to reach beyond their own borders to commit acts of repression, including inside the United States."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/296330-fbi-alleges-iranian-man-plotted-to-kill-former-national-security-adviser-john-bolton>

Radio Habana Cuba