Caracas, August 25 (RHC)-- Cuban Deputy Prime Minister Alejandro Gil held on Thursday a meeting with the diplomatic staff of his country stationed in Venezuela on the occasion of his official visit to the South American country.

The Cuban embassy described the exchange as fruitful, in which Gil updated on issues of interest concerning the current context in the Caribbean nation.

The deputy prime minister is carrying out an intense schedule that includes meetings at the highest level, such as the one with the executive vice-president of Venezuela, Delsy Rodríguez, with whom he reviewed the progress of the integral cooperation agreement between both countries.
