

New music from Buena Fe on digital platforms

Havana, October 18 (RHC)-- The group Buena Fe today spreads its music on digital platforms, with the seductive aroma of Café, title of the most recent song of the Cuban band, included in selection of the album Morada.

From the social network facebook, the lineup led by Israel Rojas, invited to listen to the song that is available "in all the profiles of the group and the services of Spotify, iTunes, Apple Music, Tidal, Google play, YouTube music, Deezer, Shazam, Altafonte".

Produced by Rojas and with arrangements, recording and guitars by Yoel Martínez Rodríguez, the single featured the talents of Yandi Martínez (double bass), David Hernandez Navarro (Percussion), Adolfo

Martínez Rodríguez (Mixing and Mastering) and Galician singer-songwriter Andrés Suárez, co-author of Café and Volar sin ti, another of the CD's tracks.

Founded in the easternmost of Cuba's provinces, Guantanamo, the Buena Fe band is distinguished by a style of singer-songwriters' songs, which, according to connoisseurs, is based on the trova, essentially.

For two decades of career, Rojas has composed and led the renowned group together with guitarist Martínez, who defend in each of their compositions the truth of Cuba and have taken their music to countries in the region and Latin America, in addition to a coherent discourse and in tune with the socio-political reality of the island.

His work includes a dozen albums under the titles Déjame entrar, Arsenal, Corazonero, Presagios, Extremistas Nobles, Pi (3,14), Dial, Soy, sobreviviente and Carnal, which have managed to remain in the popular taste, while exhibiting the most authentic expressions of Cuban culture and the roots of the island's culture.
